Unlike more structured play elements, the Freestanding Curved Post Triple Wing Climber is open for the wildest of interpretations. Are they shields, surfboards or portals to another dimension? The imaginative play options are endless! The three oval panels, or wings, are filled with varying sizes of holes that can be used to peek through or hold onto while spinning. The unique design and bright colors of this climber are sure to grab the attention of kids from every side of the playground. Horizontal bars on the bottom of each end grant little ones access to the higher parts of the panels, making them suitable for many ages. Children can just grab a cutout within their reach and use their own body weight to twirl themselves or their friends. The attractive and contemporary curved posts make it an easy fit into any existing playground. Try the vivid colors pictured or discuss custom options with the AAA State of Play sales team.
